

Domenica Minniti Gonas

Professor of Italian Linguistics & Translation Studies in the Department of Italian Language and Literature at NKUA.

She studied Languages and Literatures at University Orientale of Naples and Italian Linguistics at the Sapienza of Rome. In 1996 she completed her PhD in the Department of Philology (NKUA).

She teaches courses in Linguistics and Translation Studies, with a particular interest in Historical Linguistics, Applied Linguistics and Translation.

She has published several academic articles in international and peer reviewed journals (Annales of the School of Philosophy of the NKUA, Rivista Italiana di Dialettologia, Italia dialettale, Studi italiani di Linguistica Teorica e Applicata etc.) and is the author and co-author of 10 books.

From 2014 she is the scientific director of the Center of Language, Translation and Studies on the contact between Italian and Greek language at NKUA, of the international conference Italoellenica, as well as of 4 educational programs at the E-learning Center of the NKUA. She coordinates the working group for the Italian language in the Institute of Educational Policy. From 2018 she is a member of the Atlante Linguistico Mediterraneo as well as of the Osservatorio degli italianismi nel mondo (Accademia della Crusca, Florence).